Footsteps of Spring is a musical and literary journey into the world of New England naturalist, Henry David Thoreau (1817-1872). The intent is to bring the beauty and imagination of Thoreau's words to life on the stage through readings and through musical portraits of the words and images.

The readings are taken from two sources: Walden and the Journals. Selections from Walden open and close the narrative. At the beginning, the writer explains why he undertook his journey into the woods. "I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life..." At the end, he reflects upon the transcendent beauty which he has seen. "Time is but the stream I go a-fishing in... Its thin currents slide away, but eternity remains."

The middle sections of the work draw upon entries in Thoreau's Journals. Here, he observes the natural world around him. There is the rumbling of thunder and the whispering of wind. There are the silent footsteps of spring. Mornings bubble with energy. The hazy, June weather is oppressive. There are berries falling to the ground. There is dew on the cobwebs – everywhere! [The cobwebs are dropped by the fairies.] Throughout, the Observer has an insatiable thirst for acquaintance with his surroundings. "I wish to know an entire heaven and an entire earth!"

On each step of the narrative journey the music is there for correlative expression. This may take the form of texture (perhaps the opening sparse sonorities represent the peacefulness of the woods), rhythm (the repeated eighth-notes in the strings might be the footsteps on the journey), a "walking" theme (played by the Violin near the beginning) or chord clusters in the piano for the heaviness of summer. The listener might hear thunder, the rippling of the stream or the dance of the fairies. At the ending, perhaps the sky is "pebbly with stars." An active listener imagination is encouraged!

The musical score consists of four systems of music. The first system (measures 352) features the Violin (Vln.) and Cello (Vc.) playing eighth-note patterns. The second system (measures 352) features the Piano (Pno.) playing eighth-note chords. The third system (measures 355) features the Violin (Vln.) and Cello (Vc.) playing eighth-note patterns on the string, with dynamics 'dim.' and markings 'on the string'. The fourth system (measures 355) features the Piano (Pno.) playing eighth-note chords, with dynamics 'dim.' and a 'Rédo.' instruction. The fifth system (measures 359) features the Violin (Vln.) and Cello (Vc.) playing sustained notes with dynamics '(dim.)' and 'p'. The sixth system (measures 359) features the Piano (Pno.) playing eighth-note chords with dynamics '(dim.)' and a 'Rédo.' instruction.
